

Sept. 27, 1997

To Whom It May Concern:

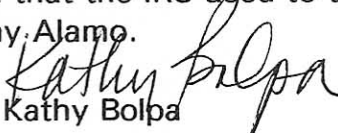

During a period of time over the years I have known of a situation that Birgitta Gyllenhammer, Tony Alamo's former wife tried to get in contact with Tony Alamo to reconcile with Tony by sending cards addressed from Heidi Hoffman or by calling Tony on the phone on different occasions.

I went with Lydia Willis in the latter part of 1990 to meet with Birgitta at a West Hollywood restaurant on the sunset strip. While Birgitta was speaking she spoke very affectionately about Tony and she wanted to know how he was doing. Birgitta told us that she was being threatened by the IRS. The IRS told her that they were going to audit her books and impose huge fines if she didn't cooperate in falsely testifying against Tony Alamo.

Birgitta also said that the IRS threatened to auction off her two very lucrative clothes designer dress shops,(one in Beverly Hills and the other on Sunset Strip) her three million dollar home in Pacific Palisades and then deport her back to Sweden and be banned from the US.

Birgitta never gave any reason for us to believe that she was afraid of Tony or that she feared for her life, on the contrary, Birgitta was very fearful of the IRS to the extent of lying about Tony saying he gave her 45,000 dollars a month. That would be over half a million during the course of one year. Where are Birgitta's receipts? Did the IRS have her show for what she bought?

Birgitta was just another person that the IRS used to target vicious and untruthful statements against Tony Alamo.

Kathy Bolpa

PS Birgitta is a Swedish princess and an heiress to the Volvo Automobile Company. Before and after Tony was married to Birgitta she drove a Rolls Royce and also had a Mercedes Benz. She was a famous clothes designer for the rich and famous.